There’s been much amusement here at ScotsGay Towers over the hoax Scottish Executive press release which contained a coming out message from Malcolm Chisholm, the Communities Minister, in which he claimed that he was “gay and in love”.

Would that it were true - we could do with some more out and proud politicians at the top of the pile - fuck knows, there are enough of the closeted variety.

Anyway, the media and political fallout was predictable: this was treated as a slur on a respected gay activist charged with public naughtiness where a gullible Court believed her tale and jotted herself at the trial of a well known gay politician.

The MP, now retired, was not a bit since then and it is a surprise to many that getting it wrong about somebody’s sexuality should be such a big deal. If the hoax release had related to Mr Chisholm’s (as far as I am aware non-existent) collection of garden gnomes, would there have been such a stushie?

It’s all very silly

On the other hand, if a national newspaper were to describe me as heterosexual, I would be deeply hurt and have no alternative than to lodge an immediate action for defamation seeking large damages for the ruination of my life. One’s principles should never stand in the way of Free Money!

WaterAid Munro Challenge

The Gay Outdoor Club fielded a team of five people in the WaterAid Munro Challenge on Sat 11th Jun.

The team along with five GOC supporters climbed A’ Chailleach (3051ft), Carn Sgulain (3018ft) and Carn Dearg (3100ft), to the north of Newtonmore.

The group were blessed with dry weather, sunny spells and a cooling breeze: perfect hillwalking conditions. The target hill, Carn Sgulain, was reached at 1236pm. After a hard walk, the party even had the energy to enjoy a ceilidh in the evening.

WaterAid achieved its target of getting teams on the summits of all the 284 mountains over 3000 feet high in Britain and Ireland. The charity hopes to have raised over £300,000, which will be used to provide clean water, sanitation and hygiene education to needy people in Africa and Asia.

Overall the GOC team raised £470: together with a giftaid rebate (£130) this should provide 40 people with a lifetime’s supply of safe water. A big thank you to everyone who contributed towards the success of this event.

Old Pooves

Caffmos, the Mature Gentleman’s Club, has recently become active in Scotland (our pic is of their April meeting). It’s an organisation focusing on the older, more mature gay gentleman and his many admirers, be they young or old. In addition to a regular newsletter, contacts list and diary of events and social gatherings, Caffmos has an online community (http://caffmoscommunity.com/) which is not just another dating site but offers a platform for older gay men and their admirers to find support and form new contacts and friendship. For more information, see the Caffmos listing at the back of the magazine.

Alec Deary & Frank Watson
of Kirkcaldy Fife
are please to announce their intention to affirm their partnership in a civil ceremony on Wednesday 21st December at 15:00 at the Victoria Hotel, Kirkcaldy.

Evening entertainment from 19:30 for the great and the good and quite a few not so good and really evil will be at the same venue.

The theme for the celebration will be “FODS”

Why enter a civil partnership?

Lots of reasons. But this is only concerned about wills, pensions, Inheritance Tax and Capital Gains Tax. If you are not civil partners, and your partner dies, you can lose out seriously, losing pension and savings, and possibly losing your home. That’s why married couples are exempted from these taxes and that’s why civil partners are too.

Any state benefits you receive may be reduced. For instance when a couple on state pension gets hitched, they will get only the joint pension, a loss of nearly a quarter, and other government departments have not yet worked out how benefits will be affected. But that’s another matter.

Why is failing health so critical?

When one partner is in failing health, the other partner soon becomes worn out physically and emotionally with the constant burden of care, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. They won’t have the time or energy to investigate civil partnership. Their minds will be on other things.

While you are reading this, rack your brains to think of partners who really need civil partnership and may miss out, for health reasons. They are the couples we easily forget when they disappear from our social life. They certainly won’t know about Scotland’s procedure for partners who are seriously ill and not likely to recover.

Registrar’s can’t help

You can phone your local Registrar’s Office - just use directory enquiries and ask. But at the time of writing (July 2005) they are unsure how their duties will apply to civil partners or what they need to be telling us now. They are not expecting any instructions until late summer. (Weddings are often booked up six months to a year in advance, summer. (Weddings are often booked up six months to a year in advance, so this is the best information that other knowledgeable legal authorities. Experts differ, and it’s a complicated area. So this is the best information that most of us are likely to get hold of. But please ask your MSP and a lawyer. Now. Don’t leave it.

Start by contacting your local Registrar now

A couple where one is frail or otherwise likely to die, needs to tell the Registrar well in advance. If you turn up at the Registrar’s office at midnight on Dec 5th (the earliest day you can give notice) because your partner has suddenly taken a turn for the worse the Registrar will not have time to take the necessary steps, and, may not be in the office anyway.

But the Registrar General for Scotland can invoke Section 91 of the Act and dispense with the 15 day ‘waiting period’. The registration can take place ‘on the same day’ and ‘within a matter of hours’ just as happens for marriage. So you can get hitched on Dec 5th if you desperately need to.

The Registrar will need ‘the certificate of a registered medical practitioner’ to support claims of ill health, so get a doctor’s appointment well in advance. Normally the certificate would be expected to have been issued a couple of days before, but in some parts of the country it can take weeks to get your doctor to call. The doctor may not consider civil partnership to be a medical emergency, and the locum may not be well informed on the finer points of the Civil Partnership Act 2004. (The doctor’s certificate is valid for up to three months when the registrar registers the couple in hospital, and there is no better guideline for invoking the special procedure at the time of writing.)

The doctor’s certificate must state that the sick partner understands the nature and purport of civil partnership. The partner who makes the application must show that there is no legal impediment to you forming a civil partnership with each other, and that there is sufficient reason to grant a licence for the partnership to be formed. The application must be in writing.

(Quite separately from this, the waiting period may be reduced where there are exceptional circumstances. These need not be related to health at all. This is at the discretion of the Registrar General and there will be Regulations about this.)

There are four specific problems that may apply, and you need to ask your local Registrar about them now:

1) If the health of a partner is failing, ask to reserve an early date, preferably 21st Dec (the first possible date to register under normal circumstances). Registrars can not take applications to form a civil partnership until Dec 5th.

But they can leave time from Dec 5th to register couples who will have a pressing need, of which failing health is common. Ask the Registrar now to take your personal circumstances into account when making Dec bookings for (e.g.) marriages. (Some-sex couples have not had legal or civil recognition for their partnerships for 350 years. Heterosexual couples have not had to wait so long!)

2) If one prospective civil partner is in failing health, and has a medical certificate to say that they should not be moved from (e.g.) the hospital, the Registrar may refer to the hospital to register the couple.

Consider asking whether they have enough staff to attend local hospitals, hospices or other locations to register you personally, bearing in mind that there may be several such couples in their district.

3) If one prospective civil partner is seriously ill, the Registrar may shorten the 15 day waiting period (which could bring the earliest registration date from 21st Dec to 5th Dec). But Dec 5th could place a sudden and urgent demand on their resources. The Scottish Executive is not charged with the task of having the staff and experience to cope with this demand, so let them know if you think you may need this provision.

4) In some cases, one partner may be suffering from problems that increasingly impair their ability to communicate. For instance, someone who suffers from Motor Neurone Disease or Parkinson’s disease may think clearly but be unable to communicate fairly well on good days but not on bad days - and the bad days increase. The Registrar will claim that he or she has to be satisfied that the partner intends to enter a civil partnership and understands what they are doing. In case the date of your registration is a bad day, write to the Registrar now, and ask that the Registrar keeps your application. If it is sufficiently serious, the Registrar may need to consult (understanding and intent) - and request an undertaking that they will do this. If they will not, ask whether the Registrar will accept signed statements from friends who know that your intent has been consistent. Ask whether a doctor’s letter would be sufficient. Would your oath, sworn in front of a JP or Notary Public, be sufficient? Alternatively ask if you will need to come to the Registrar’s office on a good day in advance, so the Registrar can be confident of your intent. Will the Registrar be able to come to you, in advance? If you or your partner has difficulty communicating, the answers to these questions are critical to you. So get the answers in writing, and send copies of inadequate answers to your MSP to clarify with the SE. Moreover, section 86 of the Act says that to be eligible to register, a person must be capable of understanding the nature of civil partnership and consenting to it, so being capable of signing or making a mark is not in itself sufficient. A Registrar may ‘decide rejection’ if they believed that, at the time of intended registration, one person was not capable of understanding and consenting - under the Scots legislation they would not be eligible to register.

You will not necessarily get answers to the questions above, but it is important that MSPs are being asked, and passing the questions back to the SE. You might ask that if your Registrar is uncertain, they refer your questions to the Office of the Registrar General for Scotland.

Having other friends to work with you would help, and the local papers and radio might be interested in you as they were interested in prospective civil partners generally at earlier stages of the legislation. If you get some public attention you are more likely to get the attention you need.

If you have been campaigning for some years, this could add weight to any letter that you write.

Different from marriage?

No, there are no special deals for gay couples that married couples don’t get. But in 2005 they are unsure how their duties will apply to civil partnerships, especially if you have been campaigning for many years, this could add weight to any letter that you write.

Wills

Finally and separately, in Scotland, your will is not ‘revoked’ when you form a civil partnership, but it is wise to put something in your will if you expect to be getting hitched. If your health is failing this is more important. The Succession (Scotland) Act 1964 will apply to civil partnership as it applies to marriage. It may take time for your solicitor to get up to speed, for you to update your wishes, to get an appointment, and to approve or amend the solicitor’s first draft. This is something to get started on as soon as possible.

I’m single - what’s it got to do with me?

You need to think, hard, now, about the couples you may have forgotten, the people who are sick or just elderly and infirm. Some have fallen out of gay life. These are the people who are looking after their partners, often worn out, and too busy or too exhausted to think about the taxes that are about to hit them when their partner dies, what will happen to their partner’s pension, and the complexities of writing wills. If you do a little thinking for them now, the survivor could be saved unnecessary hardship or real poverty.

Hi there and here is this month’s round up of what’s happening North of anywhere.

Pride in Aberdeen has come and gone and despite the cool temperatures, it attracted a reasonable sized crowd to Duthie Park. Each year the organisation has become more slick and it is becoming an established event in the Aberdeen calendar. It was good to see a mixed crowd there and the entertainment and alcohol flowed freely throughout the day. It has to be a unique event in Scotland as nowhere else has provided a single focus for the LGBT community where everyone can meet and enjoy the atmosphere. A big thanks must go to all those involved in making the day a success and to all those that thought it wasn’t what you wanted I’m sure the demand for volunteers to organise next year’s event will happen very soon.

Mark Thomson would like to thank Bar Indigo for providing the buffet at the Phase Grampian awards on Thu 2nd Jun. He would also like to thank everyone who attended and collected their awards.

One of the topics discussed at the Conference at the Edge in Aberdeen a couple of months back was the lack of LGBT people taking part in sport. How many of you know an out LGBT sportsperson in your favourite sport? Not many I expect. But how many of you actually take part in sport in Aberdeen as part of a club or organisation?

A questionnaire was distributed at Pride asking people what sports they took part in. A meeting at the Phase offices recently discussed the results of these questionnaires with a view to forming a sports club in Aberdeen. A wide range of responses came back covering everything from team and individual sports to mainstream and extreme. We are in the process of compiling a list of all the sports available locally and where they are held. It would also be good to have people’s names against these sports that would be willing to act as point of contact for other LGBT people who wish to join in.

For some time now, Grampian Police have worked with the LGBT community in an attempt to address the problem of homophobic/transphobic crime and any other issues concerning the community. In an effort to improve the current service provided and identify the policing needs of the LGBT community a survey has been produced. The purpose of this survey is three fold. First, to establish the community’s perception of Grampian Police in terms of service provision. Secondly, to identify how they can build on their current links with the community and develop those to improve effective two-way communication. Finally, to provide the community with information on the current work Grampian Police is undertaking and the services they provide that are of specific importance to the LGBT community.

The survey is available from the Phace Office in Aberdeen and also from Constable Joan Morrison at Grampian Police Community Partnership Department on Aberdeen (01224) 709976 or E-mail: joan.morrison@grampian.pnn.police.uk. If you have ever had to deal with the police for LGBT issues or felt too afraid to contact the police then it is worth filling in a copy of this survey. Included with the survey is an information sheet on the work done by Grampian Police for the LGBT community and I will cover what they already do in next month’s article.

Robert Gordon’s University LGBT Society is looking to recruit new members and committee and have recently updated their website. Over the summer, the society is forming a brand new committee for next year. Everything the current society has will be at your disposal including the support of the Student Association and the rest of the committee. It’s a great opportunity to turn things round and it’ll be great fun as well. Show your interest by E-mail: rglgbclub@yahoo.co.uk or check out their website at http://www.icewag.com/LGBT/
Did you all enjoy Pride Scotia?
All those pretty, pretties from all parts, big and small! And what a nice day with all those police and stewards, “Yes, Sir”!
The Midsummer Carnival was in Queens Park the day after (how I suffer for all of you, cruising a park!). Bard in the park, Botanics this time, are doing Romeo an Juliet (let’s hope this warm spell lasts) so a wee picnic, or pic’n’mix if that’s your bag, with a big box of hankies - tears and snotters a’m tellin’ ye! Butterfly is a new bar in the west of the city (3a Park Terrace, overlooking Kelvingrove Park, near the Youth Hostel) open from the 5th of Jul, it will serve food and have karaoke. The bar is semi-subterranean, in a beautiful setting, opening hours are 8am till 11pm, so coffee and ‘Baileys cheese cake’!
To the pubs! Sad news first: Sun night in the Merchant Pride will never be the same after the departure of my beloved Angelo. Yes, he did a ‘Russel’, Oz will never be the same! Hope you enjoyed your trip pet and I, for one, am glad you’re back. Burly is still going strong. The ‘tattoo night’ was a great success and all power too the ‘portal technicians’ (door staff) who were a joy at the Arches, the more topless men with body illustrations the better, I say! Next time it’s leather, ‘bicker babies’ and ‘scooter scallies’, I say! So, if you like a bit of, uniform, real men and guys that appreciate them then pop along (details on the Venues page).
The Waterloo (our oldest and most used of watering holes!) is open again, or is it closing, or going (sorry for the bad language kiddies) STRAIGHT!! As soon as I get a straight answer, I will pass it on. The Revolver Bar has had a ‘face lift’! Well, some scatter pillows and some purple drapes! DJs Michelle and Neil, are doing turn about on Sat nights, techno and soul. We still have the ‘net trani thingi’, that I still can’t work, so I have to ask that nice bar person to change it for me (I’m sure they’re all used to this as an excuse to ‘chat them up’ by now!)
On a different note! Has anyone ever popped into the 13th Note in King Street? Veggie food, ‘saggers’, ‘gig girls’ and ‘band boys’! I knew that all the hot talent was hiding somewhere but who knew! Bands with names like ‘Lucerna’, ‘Dead Fly Buchowski’, ‘Stigma’ and ‘Injuns’. ‘STIGMA’ may not be everyone’s ‘cup of green tea’ but they are GORGEOUS, as are many who eat, drink and play there. Close enough to the Tron, as well as the Merchant Pride, it offers a different type of scene (couples and those looking to be in a relationship that lasts longer than the song that the DJ has just played for the umpteenth time!).
Yes, I bit the bullet that is the new improved Bennetts! Girls on Top and all the old ‘favourites’ are back with a vengeance! It’s still a little ‘thin on the ground’ most nights, but who said the ‘tribe’ were the sharpest tools in the box! Once word gets round it’s bound to fill up again.
Pink is still running and you can still get tickets from the LGBT Centre Café. Cube is still pulling in its ‘younger’ crowd on Mon and Tue, don’t they have school or uni or jobs too get up for!
Last, but not least, the AGM took place for the LGBT Centre, or did it? Postponed due to something or other. Anyway, the new board is as follows; George Butler, Eric Kay, Brenda O’Neil, Paul Barton, Gordon Pike and Brenda Colvin. Something was said of the Centre’s future and I will have more information, about that, after the next members’ meeting.
Wells, that’s all I have heard, seen, been told and had screamed at me, for this month anyway! Until our next merry meeting, this witch must fly!

Hello everybody. Time for a quick tour once again of the LGBT scene in Dundee.

Diversitay are expanding upon their monthly ice-breaker night by also holding a quiz! They will still be meeting on the third Wed of the month - next one being the 20th Jul - at Braes on Perth Road. Now however they have the use of the downstairs function room (down the stairs just to the right of the entrance), to create a completely safe, discreet area for those coming out for the first time, looking to meet friends or just out for some fun. First prize is £50 cash. This is also a great chance to meet the Diversitay team, discuss what you would like to see for the future of the Dundee scene or indeed to volunteer and contribute to the good work carried out by this organisation. The switchboard is now back to operating weekly, Monday nights 7-10pm on Dundee (01382) 202620.

Over the next month, Charlie’s Bar will be a Charlie and Ian less zone as holiday season for the pair approaches. Joyce will once again be taking the helm, with the help of the usual suspects Gary and James! The next quiz night was due for Tue the 5th July, a £100 first prize and various other prizes and novelties up for grabs. There will also be the disco on Fri and Sat nights, 8pm to Midnight. This now includes a combination of music and video covering various musicals and performances on the screen all skilfully brought together throughout the night by DJ Ross. Look out for upcoming events as the guys develop this idea.

Ross has also been back at the Dundee University Students Union with “Does your mother know” in June. I’m not sure if it was a one off night, so keep your eyes peeled for the possibility of future nights.

Apologies for anybody who went out looking for the ShowBar based on last month’s article. Turns out the bar isn’t actually open again as I thought, but the night involving the showing of various musicals has been resurrected and takes place in Brooklyn’s Bar. Also happening in the bar is the usual mix of good offers, karaoke and the quiz night with some great prizes. Out also has a good mix of nights and offers on, look out for details in the bar and club.

I’m keeping an eye on how things develop in Aberdeen as they look to set up an LGBT sports club (full details in the gorgeous Duncan’s Aberdeen article), and keep an open mind about how it might work out if brought to Dundee. Anyone else who would consider this a good idea should get in touch!

We were graced with fantastic weather on the day of the Pride Scotia March which was led by Edinburgh’s Lord Provost, Lesley Hinds. In comparison with the march two years previously not only was the weather fantastic but the crowd was almost trippled. Everyone had a fantastic time and full support was given by the local police. The march finished in Albany Street and participants descended on the Blue Moon or Sala for a nibble and drink. A big massive thank you to the staff for coping with such a large number of hungry people.

For those brave enough to start drinking mid afternoon, floods of folk headed up to the Street, Habana and Planet Out. All three bars had various drinks promos on throughout the day and were full to capacity - so much so that people could hardly reach the bars which resulted in the newsagent on London Road running special promos on carry out drinks! And the streets were full with folk sitting around having an impromptu picnic.

All good fun, but not to the taste of the Glasshouse Hotel who won’t have made any friends in the gay community for their attitude in trying to reclaim the street in front of their overpriced establishment.

A big pat on the back to Habana regular Kitty who put on a fantastic Beach Party at the Hallion.

The Health and Community Fair in eGo proved to be very popular with boys and girls of all ages. There were lots of stalls and amongst local organisations, only Gay Men’s Health was really notable for its absence.

Speaking of local organisations, the LGBT Centre for Health and Wellbeing will be running an LGBT Active programme over the next few months with various activities including An Introduction to Reiki, Drumming and various Art Workshops. For more information: http://www.lgbthealth.org.uk/

Anyway, enough about all that. How about all you tourists over for the summer? And, before I go any further, the LGBT businesses in Edinburgh are NOT looking for any more staff. Fancy a nibble or a bite to eat while you sit outside people watching? Why not try a snack from The Street where the kitchen is run by http://www.thedevilskitchen.co.uk/ (By the way, a happy 40th birthday to Lou).

Another place which may prove interesting in the comestibles department is the Holyrood Tavern which has re-opened under its old landlord Mark. Food will apparently be entirely vegetarian! The real ale there opens up an interesting little alternative circuit for beer drinkers as a welcome stop between the Regent and the Auld Hoose.

Also in the changing hands department has been The Complex where the new owners’ desire to spruce up has caused the cancellation of dates for Velvet and Burly. I hear that the place will re-open in time for Burly’s next gig on Sat 23rd Jul but, by then, it will have changed its name to the Mariners Club.

I hear rumours that Planet Out, The Street and Habana will have extended opening hours over the summer - or at very least during the Festival. Planet Out has had a few pots of paint applied to the walls and is looking much fresher for it. They’ve also started serving teas and coffees for the caffeine addicts amongst you. Miss Cilla Slack is now a resident DJ (well, somebody had to give her a home) on the top deck at CC Blooms. But, at weekends, DJ Blondie is your host with all the best in Dance Music downstairs. Please don’t forget that CC’s is Edinburgh’s own gay night club open 7 days a week! Entry is free and drink prices are as reasonable as anywhere else on the scene.

Feeling stressed by this column? Then why not check out an Holistic Health and Psychic Fair at the St George’s West Church in Shandwick Place on Sat 16th and Sun 17th Jul. A weekend of alternative health and psychic readings - entry free. See http://www.pureworks.co.uk/ This cozy little church is also the venue for the AIDS Quilt Exhibition which runs until Wed 13th Jul and is open 10am-4pm daily.

Garry Otton says GAYS CAN NO LONGER WAR WITH RELIGIONISTS

“In one of the most illiberal measures attempted even by this prescriptive Government… anyone who challenges the tenets of religious faith could risk criminal prosecution… (Up to seven years imprisonment). Once this measure is law, Ministers will come under pressure to act any time a religious group feels affronted… Rather than creating new legislation to censor what people think, isn’t the answer to abolish the seldom used blasphemy laws and rely on the existing rules banning offences against public order – which protect people whatever their religion? For if free speech means anything, it means freedom to criticise, to challenge and even to mock. If religions are strong they have nothing to fear from open debate”.

The Daily Mail.

Be they the politised religionists who dragged Gay News to the courts – (Do not blaspheme!) – or those who pasted homophobic posters on every billboard they could find in Scotland – (Keep the Clause!) Gays have been at war with religionists for years. Can we chide such groups for being generous providers of media rent-a-gobs; accuse them of spluttering quotes backing an iffy moral conservatism on matters sexual, or name those who hijack the media for their own pernicious ends? Will it be easier to challenge those who promote female genital mutilation, physical chastisement, forced marriage or child abuse in the name of religion? I remain sceptical! I don’t like self-censorship, but hey! Like a gay priest mincing up the aisle in a loose-fitting frock, a few beads and a sensible smoking handicap, we have to conform! And that means, for now, being nice to religionists. (Not that I wasn’t already to those precious few who put their heart before the ballot box). This month The Scottish Daily Mail found a new friend: The Kirk’s new Moderator, the Not Very Knee-jerking Rev David Lacy. Praise Be! The Church of Scotland – unfairly estimated by anti-Church propagandists to be extinct within 50 years - has a new mouthpiece. Lacy wants politicians to back policies promoting marriage. OK! So let’s give it a makeover. First off, congratulations to Martin Reijns and Karen Watts who were married in Scotland’s first humanist wedding ceremony. Some people were bound to find change a bit difficult. Take The Sunday Times Scotland, which exposed the level of dignity they wanted to attach to the ceremony with a condescending: “Zoo hosts UK’s first humanist marriage”. Gays too will be marrying by the end of year. (Not in the UK. Civil Partnership is NOT Marriage. Ed.) Where is the Church now to stop us doing to marriage what TV style gurus, Justin Ryan and Colin McAllister have done to the spread of laminated mahogany-effect, flat-pack wardrobes? Come on Kearney and O’Brien, we can’t hear you in Motherwell! Get out of The Herald and into The Scottish AdTrader! The Church of Scotland’s Rev Lacy swooned with admiration of the Caths, praising them in The Herald for having been “more coherent” than his Church in their moral positions. (I know, weren’t they just fab the way the handled the repeal of Clause 28)? The Kirk’s Lacy agrees “absolutely” with those who say the Executive mustn’t grant same-sex couples equal rights in adoption law. Praise the Lord! He said he was convinced only a man and a woman could bring up children. The Very Lovely Lacy added: “It is a traditional Christian doctrine and I hold to it. I don’t know if God has blessed any other way”. Calling on all the old stereotypes, he added that the idea of a “loving, faithful and not promiscuous” gay couple adopting children was “one point of view” he understood, but did not accept. “The other point of view is that it takes a male and female in the same loving relationship, that the child needs both to be properly grown”. And this is based on…. What? Old Moore’s Almanac? Doctor Culpepper? Something Elvis said? Lacy didn’t say. It wasn’t in the Bible, but then, it wouldn’t be… These days such ‘truths’ are found spilling out of Christian bookshops. Bless them! And Praise he! I repeat… Lacy said he looked forward to giving his opinion on controversial issues, so we can look out for him in our Scottish newspapers and other media that thankfully support me in thinking that it’s vitally important to trumpet the opinion of a religionist whenever they report on issues that affect gays. One of the most right-wing Moderators in years, Lacy thinks openly gay ministers would “rip” the Church apart. Indeed we would and must resist the temptation to try on their frocks. Our place is on our knees, in the pews, begging for forgiveness and a good thrashing when we deserve it. I’m pleased the Kirk has at last found someone to turn back the clock to an age when Britain was proud to colour the world pink and we sorted out our relationships. The Very Lovely Lacy added: “Shake-up may open door for gay couples to adopt”. He reported it as a “radical overhaul of Scotland’s adoption laws” which was “expected to pave the way for gay couples to adopt”. Ian Smith also echoed down the cavern of The Scottish Daily Mail with a “radical shake-up” that was going to spark a “moral backlash across Scotland”. Few reports went without warning how such moves would spark protests from the Church and Mr MacDonell’s report was no exception. “Such a move is expected to trigger a furious reaction from some church groups, who claim children have the right to be brought up within a stable married life”. Cardinal Keith O’Brien, commander of the Scottish Catholics told the eagerly awaiting press and The Scottish Daily Mail that these Executive proposals were “contrary to the common good”. Good man. Praise be! He added: “Support for such proposals would distort the understanding of the family, cause harm to children and promote the status of homosexual relationships. The small number of homosexual couples living together and the instability of homosexual relationships make the arguments about increasing the number of potential adoptive parents unrealistic”. In a revealing insight on how Catholics might treat young gays in their schools, he added: “Where homosexual adoption has been allowed, news coverage has revealed that potential parents who refuse to support homosexual relationships are being classed as unsuitable to adopt”. O’Brien has also claimed that gays adopting children was in open contradiction to a principle, recognised in the UN Convention on the rights of the child, (although the rights of people of a middle sex are clearly not recognised in Catholic schools – which is right, of course, isn’t it? Sorry, I don’t want to offend, but in fairness to Deputy Education Minister Evan Robson, who is responsible for the issue, he had already declared that the emphasis would remain on heterosexual families, which supports the idea that gay families are somehow second-rate. The group recommending an update of Scotland’s adoption laws have insisted that unmarried couples would have to prove an enduring family relationship with a rigorous examination of their relationship to ensure it provided stability for the child and to explore in depth their parenting abilities. Efforts would be made to ensure that all decisions were to be made in the best interests of the child. Such ‘permanence orders’ were to be a cornerstone of the proposal to allow gay couples to adopt. Heterosexual married couples like Fred and Rosemary West or Victoria Climbie’s mother, Marie Kouao and her boyfriend Carl Manning, would, of course, be exempt from such scrutiny by way of their sexual status. The Scottish Daily Mail featured a shocking quote from Glasgow West End style queen, Justin Ryan who confessed: “I’d love to give a home to a disadvantaged kid who’s had a bad start in life”. It was a lovely summer day. The sun shone and the birds sang in the trees.

After the Happy Walk, folk got rat-arsed in the pubs and streets around Edinburgh's Gay Village and/or wandered round the Health and Community Fair in eGo before heading off in the evening to Ocean Pride down in Leith.

And a very few even made their way to Reggie Dwight’s over-rated gig at Easter Road.

Spain legalises same-sex marriage

Spain legalised full same-sex marriage and gay adoption on 30th Jun. The vote in the Congress of Deputies was 187 to 147 with four abstentions. The Senate had rejected the bill, but it is the Congress that has final say.

Gay couples were allowed to begin the process of getting married on 3rd Jul, when the law change was published in the Boletín Oficial del Estado. Hundreds of thousands of people celebrated at Madrid’s gay-pride parade on 2nd Jul.

“Away from the Spanish society is responding to a group of people who for years have been humiliated, whose rights have been ignored, their dignity offended, their identity denied and their freedom restricted”, said Prime Minister José Luis Rodríguez Zapatero ...

"Today Spanish society grants them the respect they deserve, recognises their rights, restores their dignity, affirms their identity and restores their liberty.

"We are not the first [country to do this] but I am sure we will not be the last", he said. “After us will come many other countries, driven, ladies and gentlemen, by two unstoppable forces: freedom and equality.

"[This] is a small change in wording that means an immense change in the lives of thousands of citizens. We are not legislating, ladies and gentlemen, for people who are far away and unknown to us. We are expanding opportunities for the happiness of our neighbours, our work colleagues, our friends, our relatives.

"It is true that [gays] are only a minority but their triumph is a triumph for everybody. … Their victory makes us all better, makes our society better.” Gay campaigners were elated.

"Finally, gays and lesbians are no longer second-class citizens”, said the Spanish COLEGAS Federation of Lesbians, Gays, Bisexuals and Transsexuals. “We pridefully see ourselves as citizens of this great nation that is Spain where liberty and equality have triumphed at last.

"Gays and lesbians are now going to take a well-deserved rest after these past several months of suffering being viewed as strange animals — and having ourselves and our families observed under a magnifying glass”, the group said. The European Region of the International Lesbian and Gay Association called the law’s passage a blow to the Roman Catholic Church. “Spain proved that it is a modern and outward-looking society and there is no reason or justification for discriminating against LGBT people”, said Executive Director Patricia Prendiville.

"It has also proved that even strong Roman Catholic roots and heritage is not a barrier for building an inclusive and equal society. We believe the Spanish marriage victory will have a significant positive impact in other European countries where religious arguments are used to oppose the legal recognition for same-sex partners.”

Canadian lawmakers OK same-sex marriage

Following rowdy debate, Canada's House of Commons voted 158 to 133 on 28th Jun to legalise full same-sex marriage nationwide.

Courts already had forced legalisation of same-sex marriage in nine of Canada’s 13 provinces and territories — everywhere but Alberta, the Northwest Territories, Nunavut and Prince Edward Island. The measure now moves to the Senate, where it faces quick and easy passage.

"[This] is about the Charter of Rights”, said Prime Minister Paul Martin. “In a nation of minorities, it is important that you don’t cherry-pick rights. A right is a right.

"It’s about the right to love,” gay bloc Québecois MP Réal Ménard told The New York Times. “When you are in love, things are different, and everyone is entitled to that.”

Czech parliament gives preliminary approval to partner bill

The Czech Republic’s Chamber of Deputies has passed a same-sex registered-partnership bill on first reading and sent it to a committee, the Prague Daily Monitor reported.

The measure grants limited rights in areas such as health information and support payments. Civil unions would be registered and dissolved at the birth registry.

Ruling extends German partner benefits

Berlin’s Administrative Court has ruled that people united under Germany’s same-sex partnership law are entitled to each other’s pension when one of them dies.

Pride around the planet

About 300 people marched in the first large-scale gay-pride parade in Asia, the Rediff.com. Police made no effort to halt the parade even though homosexuality is illegal. “We want to tell the world we exist”, said Teesta, a 27-year-old student.

More than 125,000 people turned out for Toronto’s 25th parade — including Police Chief Bill Blair. According to CTV.ca, “The parade showcased everything from bronzed, scantily-clad dancers gyrating on floats to pounding dance music to the more sedate groups, like Grandparents for Gays and Lesbians.” Mayor David Miller told the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation: “To me, it sums up so much of what Toronto is about. Everyone’s welcome here, everyone’s respected. We’re very proud we’re the place where same-sex marriage, the first one [in Canada], was performed.”

About 10,000 marchers, but he was thwarted by the Jerusalem District Court. Gay activists blamed Lupoliandrsky’s “incitement” for the violence. Interior Minister Ophir Pines-Paz agreed, saying, “The heads of the Jerusalem municipality should self-reflect on their contribution to the incitement leading up to today’s violence.”

Muslims disrupt transvestite pageant

About 10 members of Indonesia’s Islamic Defenders’ Front barged into a Jakarta nightclub during the recent Miss Transvestite pageant.

They left after 20 minutes, when pageant organisers agreed to wrap up the contest earlier than planned. “We were all traumatised. They said we were immoral, but God created us this way”, organiser Megi Megawati told the AP.

Venezuelans stage kiss-in at Supreme Court

Gay activists staged a kiss-in outside Venezuela’s Supreme Court of Justice in Caracas on 14 Jun, demanding marriage rights for same-sex couples.

Dozens of people took part in the protest, chanting, “We’re Venezuelans, too” and “Marriages now, no more fucking around.”

“We had to repeat the protest 10 times because every 15 minutes another journalist showed up”, said Santiago Farias from the gay group Affirmative Union.

Growing up gay in this world is a big enough problem. It is a far bigger one to have the body of a man, but have an intense obsession to be one to have the body of a man, but have enough problem. It is a far bigger problem. The best of these is "DEAR WENDY" (15) set in an American mining town in which Jamie Bell, unforgettable as Billy Hope, is reduced to being a shop assistant. But come across a hobo girl one day he decides to explore an empty mineshaft one night for target practice. He becomes such a good shot he admits to a friend his new hobby. Before long he is taking several shop assistants down at night who develop a new confidence to make their newly acquired guns the more they practise. It is three quarters of an imaginative film. But the Danish director Thomas Vinterberg and writer Lars Von Trier change Jamie's commonplace personality to make him persuade his fiancé to find a new man and he marries her. Maybe they ran out of ideas. Jamie's other new movie on release now is "UNDERTOW" [15]. After his mother dies his father, Dermot Mulroney, goes west to run a farm which is breaking back as a ten year old boy and the brother and he work Dermot's problem brother, Josh Lucas, tracks them down after years in prison as he knows their father left Dermot a box of gold coins. A nightmare fight develops in which Dermot is murdered. The boys witness all and flee across country to Arizona. The two brothers are now fully maintained to make their newly acquired guns the more they practise. Both films prove Jamie is an efficient actor whose maturing looks will appeal to many.
