Tony Challis Reports on “An Inspired Gathering of Queer Atheists”

Amnesty has been brave enough to come off the fence on abortion to the extent of saying that women who are pregmannt as a result of rape in places like Darfur should be able to have abortions. The church has reacted with horror, and stopped Catholic groups funding or supporting them. The Church, of course, has to maintain complete inflexibility concerning abortion and embryo, if it allows any discussion of the idea of “souls” appearing at conception its whole case will collapse. Just don’t mention miscarriages. However, numerous Catholic schools have been working with Amnesty and giving students an awareness of the injustices in the world, and of what this secular institution is doing to alleviate them. But no more, following condemnations by bishops and head teachers?

What message will the students take from this? At the time of writing, there are crowds of men demonstrating in Khartoum demanding the death penalty for a woman who allowed a tedy bear to have an unacceptable name. These guys have had their feelings stoned by the preachers in their mosques. They have lost all due love knowing only one world view. They most likely had to learn one book off by heart at school, never being allowed to think outside the box. Had they grown up in an environment where conflicting ideas were freely exchanged, and preferably one where they were not indoctrinated in a faith system, it would have been much better now, but there’s a long road to go.

Amnesty’s point was to say how much we have to do still to reduce our time in purgatory, or whatever… - we must all suffer so as to reduce our time in purgatory, or wherever…

Polly’s key point was to describe the LGBT laws in any country as a “bellwether”. Something that shows how far that country has advanced as a civilisation. Gays and lesbians are usually the last to be addressed after rights have been given to women, ethnic groups, the disabled... we are like human backstops - the last one that the ball reaches. Polly mentioned how we are fighting for “democracy” in Iraq and Afghanistan. But what is the position and the likely future of gays there? And what does that say about what we are doing?

Altogether, an inspiring speech by one of our favourite groups. And food for thought, even at this time of solstice jollity. Things are much better now, but there’s a lack of a lot still to do!

POLICE LAUNCH UNIQUE DVD TO SUPPORT LGBT COMMUNITY

BI 100

This New Year’s Bi Scotland is celebrating its 100th monthly meeting, since its original Glasgow-based beginnings. The Inclusive support, social and campaigning group has grown to have regular meetings in Edinburgh as well, together with an online community ofInclusives across Scotland and held the UK Inclusive convention, BiCon in Glasgow in 2006. In the last year the group has had a presence on the march and at the community fair at Pride Scotland. The group held an event at the Glasgow LGBT Centre to mark International Celebrate Bisexuality Day. The group’s monthly meetings are open to all Inclusives (and those who think they may be bisexual), and are usually held at the Glasgow LGBT Centre at 7.30pm on the first Wed of each month. Note though that because of the holidays, the Glasgow Jan meeting will be held on 9th Jan rather than 2nd Jan. As long as you attend events.

REPORT

A damning new report reveals that children and the elderly are most at risk from HIV-related poverty and HIV-related deaths in Scotland. The report is called The Economic Cost of HIV among those aged over 60 years and has been published by the Terrence Higgins Trust (THT). The report highlights the effects that stigma and discrimination can have on the financial situation of people living with HIV. The report is based on data from the Scottish Household Survey and HIV Scotland calls for action to tackle the cost of poverty among people living with HIV in Scotland, including addressing age-related poverty, increasing levels of hate crime, unemployment and poor housing among people living with HIV. The report also calls for an increase in education and awareness campaigns. The report calls for an increase in education and awareness campaigns.

ARIE CALVI PARTNERS

REALLY CIVIL?

A new report “Another Year On” from Citizens Advice investigates the impact and enforcement consequences of the Civil Partnership Act 2005. The launch marks the second anniversary of the Civil Partnership legislation, which allowed same-sex couples to have the same legal responsibilities and rights as married couples. The report reveals that while many same-sex couples, who are in or who are planning Civil Partnerships, find there are many benefits to Civil Partnership, and welcome it, there are still unplanned emotional, financial and social costs that come with this radical social change. Some key issues have been identified by the report. Localised evidence suggests people are struggling with the ambiguity of language surrounding Civil Partnerships, and don’t know how to refer to their circumstantial in social situations, due to the lack of conversational terms that are equivalent to the terms of the traditional marriage. The report also found that gay and lesbian couples, who had formed a Civil Partnership were forced into revealing their sexual orientation, in situations which required disclosure of marital or partnership status. Citizens Advice is calling for all banks and businesses to use the straightforward form to ensure that the protection of “married/civil partner” leaving the sexual orientation of any couple.

MINISTER ADDRESSES ACPOS LGBT CONFERENCE

Communities and Sport Minister, Stewart Marwell, highlighted the Scottish Government’s commitment to Inclusives, gay bisexual and transgender (LGBT) equality in Scotland. The Minister praised the achievements of the LGBT Inclusives and the work of the Scottish Government in promoting equal opportunities for all. Scotland is committed to having full equality for its LGBT Inclusives.

LUVVIES

Do you have the skill, ambition and passion to be part of a production? Whether in the spotlight or behind the scenes? The Lavish LGBT Theatre Company is looking for its summer tour promising “Painted Eggs,” an original play which follows the story of a transgender woman. During the time her husband is away, she finds herself looking for love. This will be the 4th year of production and through the years after, John’s show is a fling with someone else. A story encompassing comedy, tragedy and love. Anyone and everyone – a welcome audience as there are more than a dozen. Those interested are invited to line up. A基础 focus on the main parts that you can really sink your teeth into! The group is looking for anyone who can bring their own煮 today in coming to terms with their HIV diagnoses.

FIFE

A representative from Fife Constabulary’s Kirkcaldy Community Team will hold a public meeting at the Fife Pent House from 12-2pm. This officer will be able to take any reports of hate crime and can be approached anytime or anonymously for police follow up. In addition a project has been held at the corridor of the Fife Pent Team meeting with people of all ages. Again these can be filed in anonymously or with contact details and follow up by the Community Team.

HOMOPHOBIC LAIRD OF BALGONIE

Jodie Fleming wrote: They hail themselves as ‘one of the most romantic writers to come out of Scotland’ but unfortunately they’re also homophobes. In my quest to look a romantic Scottish castle for my imminent civil partnership, I was inspired to flesh out the Laird and Lady of Balgonie Castle that same list wasn’t even on our radar. I’m pleased to confirm that all other castle approached were more than happy to offer us a venue!

ONLINE MEMORIAL

HIV and sexual health charity, Terrence Higgins Trust (THT) has launched an online National AIDS Memorial where people can remember friends, family and loved ones who have died with AIDS. The site (www.tht.org.uk/remember) highlights the fact that over 17,000 people have now died with AIDS in the UK and gives people the opportunity to formally remember someone special by adding a red ribbon to a wall on the site.

URUGUAY PASSES CIVIL-LIION LAW
Uruguayan’s House of Representatives passed a civil-union law for gay and straight couples last month. The measure had passed the Senate in Sep. It is expected to become law before the end of the year.
Uruguay will be the first Latin American country to grant same-sex couples access to civil unions on the national level.成果转化 must have taken more than 20 years, but they can take advantage of the law.
Special attention will be given to areas such as health care, pensions, parenting and inheritance, as well as to the 150,000 same-sex couples registered in civil unions in the city of Buenos Aires, the Argentine province of Río Negro, the Brazilian state of Rio Grande do Sul, Mexico City, and the Mexican state of Guadalajara, which borders Texas.

AUSSIE ACTIVISTS ARE PLEASED HOWARD LOST
Australian gay activists have expressed satisfaction with the election defeat of anti-gay Prime Minister John Howard.
In 2004, Howard successfully pushed for a national ban on same-sex marriage, on 2006, he squashed a civil-union law passed by the Australian Capital Territory, a jurisdiction similar to Washington, D.C.
Loosing both his PhD job and his longtime partner in Parliament, Howard was replaced by Kevin Rudd of the Labor Party, which has pledged to end financial and legal discrimination against same-sex couples by modifying 58 federal statutes.

THIRD ASIAN CONFERENCE
The International Lesbian and Gay Association will stage its third Asia Regional Conference in Jan, in Chiang Mai, Thailand.
The conference will be the creation of a clear organizational structure and action agenda through an Asian Regional Coordinating Team. Tied Equality in Diversity Now!, the gathering aims to recognize “the diverse ways by which genders and sexualities are experienced and expressed in Asia and appreciate the different areas of activism”.
“Conference members focus on their respective countries.”
“This conference will further advance the struggle for visibility, social acceptance, and decriminalization of LGBT persons in Asian societies,” the organization said. “A more significant part of this conference will be the creation of a clear organizational structure and action agenda through an ILGA Asia Regional Coordinating Team.”
Local organizations include Chiang Mai LGBT group and the Committee on LGBT Rights in Burma. Sponsors include the Danish organization HIVOS (Humanitarian Institute for Development Cooperation), the Dutch organization FBO (Friends of the Global Fund for Women). Additional sponsors include HUGA (ILGA is a 30 year old federation of more than 600 LGBT organizations and associated members, such as gay governments, from 90 countries).

US GAY SINGERS ALLOWED TO PERFORM IN SINGAPORE
US Christian singers Jason and deMarco, who are a gay couple, have received permission to perform in Singapore.
The decision was a surprise given that the granting of permits has been on a year-to-year basis, prohibiting a gay photo exhibition, a gay story-reading event, a forum on gay legal issues, and a speech by Metropolitan Community Churches founder Troy Perry.
Gay art is illegal in Singapore and punishable with two years in prison.
But Jason and deMarco, who were banned as recently as 2005, got a green light this time after organizers convinced the Media Development Authority that “the aim of the concert is AIDS education and HIV prevention... targeted at the high-risk groups,” an MDA spokesperson said.

20,000 PARTY IN SANTIAGO
Some 20,000 people turned out for a gay pride celebration in Santiago, Chile, last Nov.
The organizers, the Movement for Homosexual Integration and Liberation (MOVILH), said it was the nation’s largest pride event ever. Their demands included passage of anti-discrimination and civil-union legislation.
The festivities on Pasor Bulnes featured 22 DJs performing on three stages, go-go dancers and drag shows. “It was an incredible, emotional event,” MOVILH said in a statement.
“A real charge of energy to continue fighting against discrimination.”
Chilean President Michelle Bachelet sent a letter to the festival’s general coordinator, MOVILH’s goal. “Her Excellency is conscious of your sustained effort for the acceptance of sexual minorities and supports you in this act of integration of equality,” she said. “We express to you, and to all who participate in this event, the best wishes for success and we send you an affirmative greeting.”
A similar pride event in Santiago in Jul attracted some 5,000 people to the Plaza de Armas for seven hours of dancing, music and drag performances.

KYRGYZSTAN SEES 1ST GAY PAMPHLET
The first-ever Kyrgyz-language pamphlet on gay issues has hit the streets of Bishkek, Kyrgyzstan, the BBC has reported.
Syzat Sultanalieva of the local LGBT group said keep the pamphlet in stock.
“Gay issues do not seem to touch anyone. They are considered outliers.”
Sultanalieva hopes the pamphlet will educate society on gay lives, inner thoughts and feelings, and serve as a bridge between the community and society.

As another round of X Factor is upon us, the endless weeks of car crash television, unmonitored feedback and telephone voting will grip the nation until Christmas. We all know what’s going on: the same old people turn up night after night, only to network up into a frenzy over the hallowe’ed halls of Holyrood. (And my, what a difference that has made to the SNP.) Now we are celebrating civil partnership laws and the gay community and we all seem to be kind of difficult to do a review of the year! In short folks – welcome to my world!!!

Before all that though, can I just say that if SNP leaders still allow her to vent her bile and in the company who used his personal wealth to finance a campaign to keep Clause 28 in 2000.) I’ve been a member of the HotScots now for a few months and for me it is probably one of the best things I’ve done over the past few years. Initially it was an opportunity for a kick about and a chance of forgetting the cross training into my schedule as a keen athlete. After attending I realised that not only was it getting the opportunity for a kick about, something I always wanted to do since moving to Scotland, but also the opportunity to meet new people, make new friends and enthuse on a new, much broader and slightly different social life than what I knew before.

Now when I decide to go for a game of pool, watch a film in the cinema, go for a swim or head to the pub the chances are I’ll be in the company of a few of the HotScots. People ask, even amongst our own LGBT community, why do we need a gay football team and questions pose themselves as to why we would want to segregate ourselves or why not play for generic football squads or take part in other kickabouts that are already happening throughout the city?

A world where all sport is safe and welcoming for everyone is a lovely ideal, but unfortunately this is not the case especially within the culture of football. Why deny a safe, affirming environment for LGBT people to play football just because some people have a philosophical objection to segregation? By establishing sporting teams and environments that are either LGBT or inclusive for all, we are creating pathways to the viability of LGBT people. We are challenging the damaging stereotypes many people hold about LGBT people in sport, and as the Caldeonian Thames gay friendly rugby team would verify, does wonders for other people’s attitudes and prejudices. In many abusive gay and Trans people in sport all of which is healthy and encouraging? Maybe one day attitudes will have evolved so much people won’t need to ask why we have LGBT sports teams.

I am a keen sports person and an out gay man I know why I got so much from attending the HotScots. Firstly and personally it’s not me giving out of my way to segregate myself from mingling with people other than those who identify as LGBT. My week is consumed with other sporting activities that don’t present themselves as LGBT. What’s unique about the HotScots is that I don’t need to ‘come out’ when asked about my social life or ask about that inherent fear of being chastised or treated differently by other people’s disagreement that a gay man is amongst them in their sport. Most of all I don’t feel myself in the company of homophobic or sexist banter and having to deal with the dilemma, should I challenge this or not?

I’ve competed in athletics as a distance runner for many years competing and training in athletics, I’ve also been a member of a few sports teams here in the UK and Ireland and I’ve also had the privilege of competing at international level. In the five or so years I’ve been ‘out’ or let’s say not not in the face of gay, during those years competing and training in athletics, I’ve also consciously not encountered any homophobia. Sadly, the same can’t be said for the times I’ve played football before.

I’m not sure whether this is something to do with the construction of masculinity in football as a team sport or how football is at the core of masculine identity here in the British Isles. Do I not have this issue when I analyse how homophobia is embedded firmly within the culture of football from the banning and banning of team mates to thousands of homophobia slogans and gestures are the byword for premiership football. The affect of observing and experiencing these sort of rhetoric and behaviour can’t be good for the LGBT community. We’ve all heard and read too many stories about coming out whilst playing at the highest level. When athletes ‘come out’ it’s usually within a few months. Now when I want to attend the HotScots I’m able to do so. It’s not just me that has enjoyed this experience, many others have benefited from being part of the HotScots.

The hotscots has given me that opportunity to be in the company of a few of the HotScots as an ‘out’ gay man. The existence of the HotScots has given LGBT people the opportunity to attend an event that is associated with their identity. This provides an opportunity for us to take part, train or play football in a safe and affirming environment which maybe we otherwise would not have had. Teams such as HotScots send out quite a clear message that this is a sport for all! I’ve talked about my fear of experiencing discrimination from others as a gay man participating in sport. Then in less innocuous way lesbian and bisexual women also experience prejudice and discrimination in many-sports most of which relate to expected gender roles. This is evident when we look at the way homophobia is being used not just to chastise people who are LGBT but also those who might be perceived to be those people who test the boundaries of the strict gender norms associated with many-sports.

Prejudice against lesbian and bisexual women in sports discourages girls and women from participating in sport out of fear of being called a Lesbian. In many situations, even in the log international arenas such as tennis, hockey or football some women go out of their way to prove they are not lesbians.

Massive efforts have been made recently to take accountenance out of the sport, especially here in Scotland but still very acceptable in the culture of homophobia and sexism and those who have power and influence in the game prefer to remain silent and not speak out against this.

I believe for homophobia to be addressed properly in sport it would also involve acknowledging the very fabric of sexism, homophobia and gender identity that limits the sport being inclusive of all gender identities and sexual orientations. In Scottish, HotScots quite clearly challenge this and welcome everyone into the club unless that is, you choose to come along with an opposite homophobia attitude.

The HotScots train twice a week. Every Sun from 8pm to play a game among ourselves at the Astrofootball pitch at Meadowbank Sports Centre and on Thu evenings at 7.30pm there is a fitness training and skill training in the Meadows next to the new playground. For more information about training contact visit the website www.hotscots.co.uk

Part Three: "We Wendy and the broken Referee"

With Pat Robertson’s deal with Bank of Scotland aborted, the Wee Freddy’s Professor Doocet turned his attention to another recent and current event that has come to have civil rights’ taxis have taken rid of the taxi cab’s image. The Sunday Mail’s headline "MAKE PORN A HATE CRIME" was the news of the day. The Sunday Mail’s headline "MAKE PORN A HATE CRIME" raised the question of what constituted a hate crime, as well as the question of whether the law should be changed to include sexual orientation. However, the Sunday Mail’s coverage of the issue was problematic, as the newspaper’s articles were often biased and one-sided, and tended to focus on the most sensational aspects of the story. The Sunday Mail was also criticized for its coverage of the scandal, which included false and misleading information.

After some time had passed since Wendy Alexander’s resignation, the Sunday Mail revealed that the journalist who had broken the story of the scandal was working for a tabloid newspaper. The story had been circulating for weeks, but the Sunday Mail had chosen to wait until it had enough information to publish a comprehensive article. The journalist had been working for a tabloid newspaper for several years, and had a reputation for getting exclusive stories. However, the journalist had also been known to use unreliable sources and to engage in fabrication.

The Sunday Mail’s coverage of the story was met with criticism from many quarters. The Scottish Press Council, for example, said that the newspaper had failed to follow its own guidelines on the handling of cases of sexual abuse. The Council said that the Sunday Mail had failed to contact the victims of the abuse, and had not sought to verify the accuracy of the information it had been given. The Sunday Mail also faced criticism for its portrayal of the victim of the abuse, who was portrayed as having made sexual advances towards the journalist.

The Sunday Mail’s coverage of the story was also criticized for its lack of balance. The newspaper had focused almost exclusively on the sexual abuse allegations, and had given little attention to the other issues that were involved in the scandal, such as the role of Wendy Alexander in the decision to introduce the Section 28 bill. The Sunday Mail was also criticized for its failure to provide readers with enough information to make an informed decision about the issues involved in the scandal.

The coverage of the Sunday Mail’s article was met with a mixed reaction from readers. Some readers praised the newspaper for its in-depth coverage of the story, while others criticized the newspaper for its biased and one-sided reporting. However, most readers agreed that the Sunday Mail’s coverage of the story had been informative and had helped to raise awareness of the issues involved in the scandal.
Edinburgh

dún eileann

So that’s another year over and... as always in Edinburgh, we will see it out in style. Sit back, relax and enjoy it like nothing else. As usual, there are many venues, as well as pubs and bars, to choose from. The usual Hooch is available, as well as the usual Fire. A number of new venues have opened in recent years, including the popular The Garage. And as always in Edinburgh, we will see it out in style.

The crew at Habana are providing some fantastic entertainment over the Christmas period, and for longer too! Over the festive period, they have an extended licence until 3am. They have also started serving bar snacks every day from 12-10pm! The very best is coming in the festive spirit on Sun 2nd Dec with a Xmas Cabaret night, hosted by blues Coca-Chanel from 9pm. A big congrats too for the 146th they raised for Waverley Care, last month.

2017 was a sad goodbye to On Request: a regular event for a few years now, On Request was a happy go lucky, laid back environment providing: cheap drinks, party games and gaius all around entertainment, and they will be missed! Their last ever night, fittingly called ‘Last Request’, will be held on Fri 28th Dec from 11pm, at Club Edge. Guest DJs will be appearing, as well as all the usual fun and games.

After a rather traumatic year, Velvet have become the one with a high with their Drag King extravaganza on Sun 24th Dec. From 10pm-1am, DJ Leatherface and Lucy ‘Purr’ will regale the ladies with a variety of ‘uplifting gender spanning’, at the Ark on Waterloo Place. 2 floors means 2 levels, which means less queues and more drinkees! If you don’t fancy having the house in full drag, the ladies are offering a drag workshop from 4pm to help you get ready for your party!!! Tickets for this even are available in advance from Planet, Salsa, Ripping Records and Ticket Scotland.

Putting 2007 to bed once and for all, Tachos are hosting ‘The Glitter Ball’ at Studio 24 on Nye. Stylish Woody will be accompanied by Miss Cruft and Sheila’s Whols, along with Ehl Gay Christmas and MC Stainzaree!! Offering a day away of live entertainment from Fancy Nancy and the Glitterati Allstars’ – live entertainment from Fancy Nancy and the Tackno # workshop from 10pm to help you get all dressed in theme!

The Liquid Room, 9c Victoria St, on Fri 28th Dec from 11pm, at Club Edge. Guest DJs will be appearing, as well as all the usual fun and games. The crew at Habana are providing some fantastic entertainment over the Christmas period, and for longer too! Over the festive period, they have an extended licence until 3am. They have also started serving bar snacks every day from 12-10pm! The very best is coming in the festive spirit on Sun 2nd Dec with a Xmas Cabaret night, hosted by blues Coca-Chanel from 9pm. A big congrats too for the 146th they raised for Waverley Care, last month.

2017 was a sad goodbye to On Request: a regular event for a few years now, On Request was a happy go lucky, laid back environment providing: cheap drinks, party games and gaius all around entertainment, and they will be missed! Their last ever night, fittingly called ‘Last Request’, will be held on Fri 28th Dec from 11pm, at Club Edge. Guest DJs will be appearing, as well as all the usual fun and games.

After a rather traumatic year, Velvet have become the one with a high with their Drag King extravaganza on Sun 24th Dec. From 10pm-1am, DJ Leatherface and Lucy ‘Purr’ will regale the ladies with a variety of ‘uplifting gender spanning’, at the Ark on Waterloo Place. 2 floors means 2 levels, which means less queues and more drinkees! If you don’t fancy having the house in full drag, the ladies are offering a drag workshop from 4pm to help you get ready for your party!!! Tickets for this even are available in advance from Planet, Salsa, Ripping Records and Ticket Scotland.

Putting 2007 to bed once and for all, Tachos are hosting ‘The Glitter Ball’ at Studio 24 on Nye. Stylish Woody will be accompanied by Miss Cruft and Sheila’s Whols, along with Ehl Gay Christmas and MC Stainzaree!! Offering a day away of live entertainment from Fancy Nancy and the Glitterati Allstars’ – live entertainment from Fancy Nancy and the Tackno # workshop from 10pm to help you get all dressed in theme!

So, here we are again. Skint, sh*t-f...ked, shamed and barely able to lift our weary heads between a killer's hugging about and a disgusting amount of alcohol consumed, all in the name of Glamourosa!!! Honestly, the state of us!!! And to think it’s only the start of the festive party season. I dread to think what we’ll be like come 2008!!! We’ve both become overly friendly with our U-bends each morning, not to mention being on 1st name terms with half the debt collection staff at Bank of Scotland. Here’s hoping Santa is getting his wallet out cause our credit cards are crying for mercy!!! Still, we do love it and so do you dear reader we shall carry on regardless...

As we write, this latest instalment of Glaswegian Gay naughtiness, we’ve having issues with quite what to wear for the Del’s re-opening, for you, on us again!!! For the time that has the stands, the freshly painted doors will have swung open and the freshly, tanned homosexual males will be quite literally crumbling over each other to get in and my, my what changes they have made. This time round we’ve got the added bonus of being one of those of you which actually have the sense to line their stomachs before hitting the doors that will be a godsend.

Also, there is (just that we can stand the shame) a karaoke booth, for you to belt out a tune and do your best Lori’s impersonation. Personally, we feel this is classic. I mean we’ve all seen post tables, quiz machines but “pooey” frankly we’ve seen them all before, so whenever thought that one up is getting our Del’s love!!! Couple that with the new picture bars and cocktails on offer and really what more could you ask for?? Welcome back Del’s we say (and if that doesn’t get us priority service at the bar nothing will…)!!!

For those of you who were lucky enough to be on the guest list for the opening night, how amazing was Miss McIntyre and all the canapés, champagnes, bomb threats and shattered glass!!!? This evening was definitely one of a kind and we strongly doubt we will ever see anything quite like it again. Thank you for the fabulous staff and management from Alan Humphrey who kept everything running as smooth as possible in such dramatic events. We love you Alan!

What with Delmonicas hogging all the right reasons (clearing a space on the dance floor for all their Fans), we are not hard to spot. (60p per min at all times) or Movida Corona DJ Competition).

DJs and decorations, they can assure but our top tip has to be Bennets once more as DJs Grant Duff and Sam Marmullik are spinning the tracks to accompany our grooves on the dance floor!!!

Merry Christmas and Muchos Happy New Year to all our readers, MWAH xx
It’s that time of year again - forget time with your family - its time to get a kiss under the mistletoe and stay out late dancing as the pubs and clubs are open for an extra hour. For those of you that don’t venture out that often, this is an ideal time to see what Dundee has to offer, the pubs and clubs are always busy and there is always plenty going on.

For those who are still stressing about presents, remember to take a trip up to DOUBLY DISCREET for an extra special present. Their range of clothing and accessories reflects the various lifestyles and interests of those involved including all forms of the female scene. They pride themselves in being gender friendly and can advise on many matters that some may find difficult, such as makeovers and clothing changes for TV and cross dressers.

THE GAUGER has a late licence all over the festive period. The Gauger is always busy in Dec with people on Xmas Nights out or escaping them. There will be a DJ most nights throughout our Xmas providing the music and the odd bit of karaoke, to get you going for your night out. The Gauger will be holding its annual Hogmanay party again this year and will be open (I think) on Xmas Day and for a Half of the Dog on New Year’s Day.

OUT has now almost recovered from an amazing World AIDS Day which saw Michelle McIntyre performing and the club at its busiest. The festive period doesn’t show any signs of slowing down with OUT being open all 3.30am throughout the rest of Dec and is open right through from the 1st Dec till New Year’s Eve. OUT will hold its annual Xmas Eve Party with Dean playing all your Xmas dance floor classics and Jamie will be providing you with an escape from the family on Xmas Day night. Dean will be welcoming as many of you as possible to see in the New Year with OUT’s Hogmanay party, from personal experience spending New Year’s Eve in the club is a good night. All the usual drinks prices will be available from the bar and the door prices will not increase over Xmas like many clubs do.

BROOKLYN’S is also gearing up for another great festive period. They are also open every night throughout Dec including Xmas Night from 7pm, they are also open on New Year’s Day night, to allow you a recovery drink or two! Note that every other night throughout the festive period Brooklyn’s is open from 6pm. Kerry will be hosting Brooklyn’s Xmas Eve Party with a DJ providing music to get you all into the Xmas Spirit. Brooklyn’s will also hold their annual Hogmanay party which will see the New Year in, style. The rest of the nights over the Xmas period will be a mixture of DJ’s and Karaoke.

DIVERSTAY LGTB GROUP phone line will still be taking a break over the two weeks of Xmas, but you can still contact them by e-mail if you need any information. This e-mail will be checked on a more regular basis during this time and Diversitay will reply and help in any way they can. Diversitay’s phone line will resume service on 7th Jan, Diversitay are currently looking for new volunteers for the phone line and other workers carried out by the organisation, for more details, Email them at contact@diversitay.org.uk. As always Diversitay would like to wish everyone in Dundee Happy Xmas and New Year, and remind everyone to be safe over this party period, don’t over do it and always practice safer sex.

DVS is a youth group for young people aged 15 and under who have issues with their sexuality, or with the sexuality of a member of their family, or of friends. They offer a safe, supportive, and friendly environment where you can meet and discuss issues affecting the LGBT community, friends and families. They meet on Sat afternoon between 4-6pm in Eighteen and Under on J Vercaen Street, on the corner of Bell Street. For more information contact 01382 266222 or E-mail: dvs_dundee@yahoo.co.uk

DUNDEE DYNAMOS FC is a newly created gay friendly football club for Dundee and the surrounding area. Currently in the process of setting up, they have been generating a fair amount of interest and receiving messages of support from across the UK. They are looking for players of any ability at present to encourage more gay people to take an active interest in football whether they are beginners or veterans! Once the team is up and running, they plan to have regular matches including a mini tournament in late April.

Dundee Happy Xmas and New Year, and hope to see you all in the Gauger and around town at Diversitay’s Xmas Eve Party.

Film Reviews

by Malcolm Epstein

I hope nobody in this glorious and pleasant land fancies having sex with a horse. A few years ago in America a man was shot dead after having sexual intercourse with one and, yes, you believe it, a documentary about it called ZOO opens in Feb. Thank goodness in this country we are happy to make do with a magazine of horning humanity like the incredible 21 models in volume 15 of Mike Allen’s Gays.

There might be those amongst us not aware that in the thirties and forties Bette Davis was the most compelling screen personality in the world. Between 1934 and 1946 her films could fascinate you as part of the glagow film festival. There is no one more remarkable as NOW WARRIOR JEBBEL, DARK VICTORY, THE LETTER and THE LITTLE FONDS, ALL ABOUT EVE has become an obsession with many. She is a theatre star who must to help a fan, Anne Baxter, who plots and schemes to take over her parts. Cinema does not come better than this.

I am delighted the best films of the past are being reviewed. A 1959 hit from Alfred Hitchcock THE LADY VANISHES plays key cities. Mostly we see a train being stopped at a leaves Germany by the Gestapo, it is still very exciting. Mr Lumet would have considered in his in-demain youth.

The Kite Runner (12a) has been filmed as a book read by millions. In 1970’s Afghanistan people suffered when the Russian army arrived. Those who could emigrated, This family saga will have a public that loved the book that wonderfully British character actor Timothy Spall to stop the princess marrying her prince. The limitless budget of the Walt Disney media means the special effects are breathtaking. It is the family film of the year. I was enthralled by Enchanted! If you wear a mask, WE OWN THE NIGHT (15) is on the fabric badges of New York police officers’ uniforms. The law is fighting the drug dealers. Joaquin Phoenix runs a nightclub frequented by them and, realizing they will murder anyone in solo/decides to go undercover for his policeman brother, Mark Wahlberg. It will keep you wide awake.

Britain’s best-known TV investigator journalist, Donald Macintyre, has turned director to make a VERY BRITISH GANGSTER (15). He must have an extraordinary personality as he persuaded the Noonan crime family in Manchester to talk about their lives. Their main man, Dominic, is gay. Donald knows them over the years and watches them in court as they face charges. No-one else in the world is making films like Mr Macintyre.

SLEUTH (15), based on a hit play, opened to mixed reviews as critics compared it with the first version made in 1972. In that one a successful novelist, Laurence Olivier, is visited by the young Michael Caine, who is having an affair with his wife and asks him to divorce her. The mature Mr Caine plays the novelist in the new version and Jude Law is the young lover. Both versions are worth seeing. Slick editing makes India look impressive in THE DARJEELING LIMITED (15) that tells three-brothers tracking down their missionary mother. The three leading men, Owen Wilson, Adrien Brody and Jason Schwartzman have appeal.

CURRENT RELEASES

I lost interest in animated films many moons ago but word of mouth from the States told me ENCHANTED (6c) was worth seeing, as animated characters became human in New York City. Turn out it’s a great musical with a fantasy plot that wins Susan Sarandon as a villainess who orders considerable gay interest. The best looking guys you have ever seen are in DANTÉ’S COVE on two discs. The leading men make love on beds, in showers, swimming pools and roll across lawns under the waves. The plot gets in the way about a haunted hotel that also has some wondrous lesbian girls. Despite some exhausting chases, the guys will keep you watching.

NUDE BOYS SINGING should have had the word men in the title as they are certainly old enough. It is a Los Angeles stage show with many comedy and dramatic lyrics, with ten guys starting nude and often dressed as drag kings. Polished choreography keeps it good to look at.

ANNABELLE, set at a Catholic boarding school for tomboy girls and shows, yet again, that students are not shy about making passes at their lady teachers. Teachers of both sexes tell me students can be hard to resist. But it can lead to major troubles!
