Andrew Doyle talks to Scott Capurro
Not a Proper Lesbian…?

I am not in the least bit embarrassed to admit that, whenever possible, I enjoy being female. I have voted in every general election in my life, and even though I have never had a male partner, I do consider myself to be as much of a feminist as any man. Now surely I am not the only one to think this, so I hope “horripilation” is a sign that feminism is still relevant to today’s society. I was brought up male and desexualised at an early age because that was the way I was brought up.

Now don’t get me wrong, I agree with equal opportunities, abortion and all that. I am very thankful that’s where it ends for me. But I am afraid for what the ladies of the past have fought for and won. Yes, I have short spiky hair and I am not on the scene every night of the week, but I have played the “female card”. I instinctively became the worst lesbian in the world. How don’t I mean it? I agree with equal opportunities, abortion and all that. I am very thankful that’s where it ends for me. But I am afraid for what the ladies of the past have fought for and won. Yes, I have short spiky hair and I am not on the scene every night of the week, but I have played the “female card”. I instinctively became the worst lesbian in the world.

It seems to me that feminism is no longer relevant to today’s society. I was going to read on to find out what I think this…. so I type “feminism” into Wikipedia, and apparently I’m not a feminist. Seems there are many saying so; time and time again the same stereotypes about a particular group are repeated… and time and again we’re told to question my lesbian credentials.

New Bill Sweeps Clean

The Sexual Offences (Scotland) Bill modernises the law, replacing all of Scotland’s antiquated laws about sex with modern, progressive rules. It introduces a number of changes to criminalise only non-consensual sex, and sexual activity with children, and makes rape the only sexual assault that can be successfully prosecuted.

The Bill also means that non-consensual sex will be fully protected from the law, including sexual assault (spreading relevant assault), and concerning offences to those without those who are consent. It also means that non-consensual sexual activity, to a new crime of sexual activity, and sex with someone who is under the age of consent. The Bill also makes it an offence to engage in consensual sexual activity, including oral and anal activity, if the person does not consent to, and the person used to obtain consent or forbearance, and to use any means of force, fraud, or coercion to obtain sexual activity, including oral or anal activity, and to engage in consensual sexual activity, including oral or anal activity, if the person does not consent to, and the person used to obtain consent or forbearance, and to use any means of force, fraud, or coercion to obtain sexual activity.

The Bill proposes some changes to the law on consensual sexual activity between young people. It introduces a new definition of sexual activity between young people, which is defined as sexual activity between two or more people aged 12 or over, and the consent of both parties is required. Norway

Norway's Parliament legalized same-sex marriage in the country on May 20. An estimated 3,500 people gathered outside the prime minister's office in Oslo to celebrate the new law, which was passed in late April. Prime Minister Jens Stoltenberg and his partner, Dr. Per Østvold, were among those present to mark the occasion.

The law, which was backed by the ruling Labour Party, the Centre Party, and the Progress Party, makes Norway the 17th country to legalize same-sex marriage. The move comes after years of debate and lobbying by LGBT rights groups, who have long advocated for the right to marry regardless of sexual orientation.

In his address, Stoltenberg said, "This is a historic day for Norway and for the world. It is a day of hope and a day of freedom."

The decision was met with applause and cheers from the crowd, who waved flags and sang songs of celebration. Many held up signs that read "Yes to marriage equality," and others held hands to symbolize the love and commitment of same-sex couples.

The law is expected to come into effect on July 1, 2022, and will allow same-sex couples to marry in Norway's 100 villages. The government has also announced plans to introduce a new law that would allow couples to register as civil partners, which would provide them with similar rights and protections as married couples.

Asia

LGBT groups in Bangladesh, Nepal, and India have launched a campaign to raise awareness about the need for legal recognition of same-sex relationships. The groups say that many LGBT people face discrimination and harassment because they are not legally recognized as members of the community.

On June 1, a group of transgender people and allies marched through the streets of Dhaka, Bangladesh, demanding legal recognition of transgender individuals. The march was organized by the Bangladesh Transgender Association and supported by other LGBT groups.

The groups say that transgender people often face discrimination in the workplace, in education, and in accessing healthcare. They also say that many transgender people are forced to live in poverty or on the streets because they cannot find work.

Poland

A court in Warsaw ruled that a gay couple could not adopt a child, even though they had been together for 20 years. The couple, who are both Polish citizens, had been in a civil partnership for 12 years and had been trying to adopt a child since 2011.

The court said that the adoption of a child by a same-sex couple would be against the country's constitution, which defines marriage as a union between a man and a woman.

The couple said they would appeal the decision, and they plan to seek legal advice. They also said they would continue to try to adopt a child, despite the ruling.

The court decision came after a series of similar cases in recent years, in which courts have ruled against the adoption of children by same-sex couples.

Thousand Marches in Tel Aviv

Thousands of people marched in Tel Aviv's 10th gay pride parade. The march, which lasted for hours, was led by many local celebrities and political figures. The parade ended with a rally in a park near the center of the city.

Thousands March in Warsaw

Several thousand people marched in Warsaw's gay pride parade, which took place on July 25. The parade was the largest in the city's history and was attended by many local politicians and celebrities.

The parade began in the city center and ended in a large park near the center of the city. The marchers were met with cheers and applause from the crowds, who waved flags and sang songs of support.

The parade was organized by the Warsaw LGBT Group and supported by other LGBT groups in the country.

The marchers said they were demanding equal rights and protections for LGBT people in Poland. They also called for an end to discrimination and violence against LGBT people, and for the government to recognize same-sex relationships as valid.

For years Andrew Baines has been an exhibiting artist at The Artery Gallery in St Andrews and Crieff. He has exhibited extensively in Europe, the UK and Canada as well as around Australia and lately has been featured in several of the major art shows in Australia. Baines was born in the UK but has lived in Scotland for over 20 years and has established himself as one of the leading figurative painters in the country.

One of the leading and most well-known of the emerging artists in Scotland, Andrew Baines was introduced to the Scottish public three years ago by the Artery Gallery in St Andrews. Since then, he has proved equally collectable in Scotland, where he has been introduced by the Artery Gallery in both St Andrews and Crieff, and can also be viewed in The Artery Gallery in Crieff.

Andrew Baines has been a finalist in no less than twelve competitions, two of which have been for the Australian Painting Prize. With a strong resemblance to the work of Belgian artist Lucien Freud, Baines’ figurative paintings have been collected by a number of private and corporate collectors, making him one of the leading artists in Scotland. Baines has been a finalist in no less than twelve competitions, two of which have been for the Australian Painting Prize.

With other huge influences being Andy Warhol, David Hockney and the German photographer, Andy Warhol has been introduced to the Scottish public three years ago by the Artery Gallery in St Andrews. Since then, he has proved equally collectable in Scotland, where he has been introduced by the Artery Gallery in both St Andrews and Crieff, and can also be viewed in The Artery Gallery in Crieff.

Soho Glasgow
HotScots at Large

On Friday, Tony Challis and Tanya Simpson walked in Nottingham was busier than usual. Eight football teams from around Britain had arrived for the HotScots at Large scoring two goals each. J. P. and Craig both doing extremely well, you have to be special to get past them! HotScots play off for third place, with a score of 2-0.

Hi there! This is a how-to article on how to make your own website. We'll cover the basics, such as choosing a platform, designing your site, and creating content. By the end of this tutorial, you'll have a fully functional website that you can be proud of.

1. Choosing a Platform
   - There are many platforms available, but the two most popular are WordPress and Squarespace. WordPress is free and offers a ton of customization options. Squarespace is a paid service but offers a simpler, more streamlined experience.

2. Designing Your Site
   - Determine the layout of your site. Will it have a single page or multiple pages? Will it have a menu or a search bar? Decide on the color scheme and font styles.

3. Creating Content
   - Write compelling copy and create high-quality images. Make sure your content is engaging and informative.

4. Testing and Launching
   - Test your site thoroughly to ensure everything is working correctly. Once you're satisfied, launch your site and promote it on social media and other channels.

Congratulations! You've just created your own website. Go out and make a success of it!
